Chapter 2 - Snow White (Part 2)	4

1 - Snow White (Part 1)

Once upon a time in a kingdom far, far away, there lived a king and queen who had a son, but the queen was expecting a second child soon. One day, when it was snowing, the queen was sewing near a window. She pricked her finger, and a drop of blood fell on the snow.

"If only I had a child who had snow-white skin and red lips. Maybe this next child will be the one," she whispered as she smiled.

And during early May, the queen had given birth to a baby girl with brown hair, pure, snow-white skin, and tiny, ruby-red lips. She had decided to call the child Snow White, yet she was usually referred to as Rachael. Shortly after, the queen sadly died due to an unknown reason...

A while later, though, the king remarried to a beautiful queen, but she was rather good at hiding her true personality-- she was often wicked and mean, especially to Snow White and her older brother, whose name was Andrew.

And the queen often asked her mirror- "Mirror, Mirror, on the wall, who in this land is fairest of them all?"

A very random face appeared on the mirror. "Why, you are the fairest of all, Queen Karley."

Karley smirked to herself and laughed the most evil laugh ever...

By the time Snow White had reached age seven, she was often allowed to play outside of the castle-- this meant she'd always help out animals that she saw, and she often answered people's questions as long as it dealt with how to get to a certain place in the castle. However, due to her autism, she didn't speak as much as her older brother, meaning she was rather quiet and peaceful, another good tribute she inherited from an ancient family member.

The queen once again asked her mirror the same question that I will not put again due to being lazy (fourth wall breakage count: one!).

The mirror said something different though-- "You are very fair. However, young Snow White is the fairest in the land."

"This is impossible!" the Queen shouted as she threw down a vase and broke it. "She MUST be stopped..."

That night, she had called a young huntswoman-in-training to the palace. The girl was about nine years old, and she had brown hair that reached to her waist (with black-and-yellow locks on the sides near her face), light-blue glasses, luminous brown eyes, and she often wore a purple-and-green uniform.

"Young Huntswoman-Trainee Rae Rodri! I have a request from you!" the queen boomed.

"Yes, ma'am?" Rae replied, trying to cover her ears. She too had a type of autism similar to Rachael's, only she could communicate more.

"I want you to... Kill Snow White."

"K-Kill her?!"

"Do you want food for you and your little brother or not?!"

"I do, ma'am, but why must I?"

The queen pulled out a dagger that sparkled, and then gave it to the nine-year-old. "You must prove that you have done your duty with this dagger. Then you'll get your reward."

Rae only nodded and left the room.

(If you know the story of Snow White, then you know where THIS is going.)

2 - Snow White (Part 2)

"I came because someone's waiting for you in the forest."

Rachael only cocked her head in confusion, but when her friend led her towards the forest, she couldn't help but follow her.

"Flowers!" the princess shouted as she ran towards the purple flowers as the huntswoman apprentice began to take aim. "Rabbit, ladybug, squirrel, birdie..."

Rae couldn't help but scream, as Rachael quickly turned to her.

"I don't want to kill you, sis! The queen's trying to make me!"

"She wants to...?!"

"Listen here and listen good, Chibi-Rae. Take my advice and run as far as you can into the forest until it's safe to come back, alright?"

The younger girl nodded as she waved goodbye and ran deeper into the forest. But it got a little too much for her, as she could of sworn the trees had creepy faces on them, and she didn't notice the small bow from her hair fell off.

Eventually, she reached a small house, and luckily, she was able to get in.

"Seven chairs, seven plates, seven forks and knives," she counted, "seven beds upstairs. Seven people live here. That's alot."

Guuuu....

Rachael's stomach growled, and she realized that she had forgotten about lunch! The princess then noticed some bread and cheese on each of the seven plates, and she was about to take one.

'Wait a minute. This isn't my food so I shouldn't take it. Maybe I should wait for them to come back.'

But Rachael immediately got a thought about seven people trying to attack her for the queen's sake--

"I'll just take a little from each plate!" she shouted as she started to rip off small pieces from each piece of bread and eat them. "It's yummy...."

The little girl then yawned loudly, deciding that now she should get some rest. She climbed up the steps and layed down in one of the beds, proceeding to go to sleep.

"....It's off to home we go~!"

An hour later, seven five-and/or-six-year-olds were walking into what seemed to be the same cottage Rachael was currently asleep in.

"Look, you guys!" a girl wearing blue with glasses shouted as she pointed at the cottage, "The front door is open!"

The other kids screamed as they ran towards the house. When they got there, they slowly walked in, a little scared as they did.

"Look, someone nibbled on our bread," a boy wearing purple clarified as he pointed at the table.

"Very good, Noah," the girl wearing blue replied to him.

"Someone's upstairs, Reimu!" a girl wearing green notified.

"Seriously, Ellie?" the girl in blue, Reimu, asked.

"Yes."

The seven children then ran upstairs, only to see Rachael sleeping in a bed with purple covers on it.

"She's in your bed, Noah," a boy wearing red told the boy wearing purple.

"I can see that, Aaron," Noah told him.

Rachael then woke up to see the seven children. "Who are you all?"

The girl wearing blue stepped forward. "My name is Reimu, and these are my friends. Well, the girl in green is my twin sister."

"I'm Noah," Noah greeted.

"I'm Ellie, I'm Reimu's sister," Ellie said as she smiled.

"My name's Josh, my older sister's a huntswoman-trainee," a boy wearing glasses and a yellow outfit said as he bowed.

"I'm Janetta," the girl wearing orange shyly admitted.

"I'm Aaron," Aaron introduced himself.

"And my name is Hana!" the girl wearing curly-cue pigtails and pink squeaked.

"You're all so cute!" Rachael admitted, "My name is Snow White--"

"THE PRINCESS?!" the children shouted in glee.

"--Yeah. But you all can call me Rachael."

"Rachael! Can you cook?" Reimu asked. "My older sister can, but she didn't come back yet. That's why I ask you."

"I can cook," Rachael answered.

"Are you good at games?" Aaron asked. "I love games."

"I like games too! Maybe we could play sometime."

"How about drawing? Do you like drawing?" Ellie asked.

"I LOVE drawing!"

"Ooh! Ooh! I got one!" Hana squealed. "Can you be my mommy?"

Rachael nodded as Hana jumped into her arms, screaming happily as she did.

"Not too loud, Hana-chan."

"Okay, mommy."

(About the dwarves/kids, they're supposed to be based off friends. Josh is Rae's brother and Aaron is my brother. I was too lazy to come up with silly names. XD

And I won't be able to write as much due to school, so I'll only have little time to update TT^TT)
