

My feeling of Columbine

By Orionfang

Submitted: February 19, 2004

Updated: February 19, 2004

Something to do with Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold

Provided by Fanart Central.

<http://www.fanart-central.net/stories/user/Orionfang/1974/My-feeling-of-Columbine>

Chapter 1 - Yin and Yang

2

1 - Yin and Yang

Okay, I was in 6th grade when all of this stuff happened and it did not really bother me then. Now I am a High School senior, a lot older, and realize what an effect it had on even me from so far away. Yes, Eric and Dylan were being teased and harassed by the jocks and stuff in school, but that happens in all schools. No matter where you are. I understand their pain because I have been there too. I also understand what it is like to be popular as well, and that's no treat either. Both sides have good and bad. Just the bad took over that one time. The focus should really be on the pain of both sides. Yes, Eric and Dylan were hurting...However, so were others after that. Pain begets pain in a never ending circle. Forever Eric and Dylan will be remembered, but not in the ways they should have been. Not as respected, good people. But as people who killed 13 people and who are now hated by the majority of the world. The people who died will be remembered more because they were loved. It's yin and yang and there's no stopping it. You would have to stop life itself. However, between all of this, I am here typing on my little computer, and realizing the huge finality of all. But you know what? I came through the same darkness Eric and Dylan did. If they had the strength in their hands to hold the guns, they had the strength in their hearts to heal. Which, if they had been given more time on all sides, they all would have.